<td>Course Description</td>
<td>Winners and Losers explores how inequality has been reproduced in Australian history and how successive generations have treated the casualties of the economic system. It asks which competing groups in society were responsible for change and what political and cultural values influenced their decision-making. It examines the historical relationships between poverty and &quot;social problems&quot; such as domestic violence, analyses Australia's image as home of egalitarianism and examines eugenic ideas and practices. Race, gender, class, age and religion are important categories of analysis in all topics. The course interweaves chronology and theme and makes links with contemporary society to provide the depth of perspective for a critical engagement with contemporary debates on issues related to welfare. It is particularly pertinent to students of social work, law, medicine and politics as well as students of history.</td>

3. Learning and Teaching Rationale

My fundamental aim in teaching is to encourage students to share my own love of ideas – to build arguments, then juxtapose contradictions, to observe irony, pathos, paradox, aspiration and ‘the ordinary’ in human experience past and present. I promote student engagement in the learning process by encouraging a supportive and stimulating environment for discussion and activity in tutorials and by being available to students for personal consultation.

4. Teaching Strategies

Lectures and tutorials provide the framework of the course. The research and writing you do in your own time enables you to develop your research interests.

The lectures provide much input from me but are also interactive. They distil wide reading, summarise debate, present inaccessible material, are illustrated and come with their own question sheets. Unless you attend lectures regularly you will not have ‘heard’ the course and will not be able to write an adequate ‘In-class Reflection’ on the course at the end of the session.

The two-hour tutorial enables us to engage in a variety of forms of Learning and Teaching:

1) Small-group and large-group discussion of key readings in the reading kit. All students must read all the assigned readings in the study kit for each week and come to class prepared to discuss them. The tutorial readings focus on specific aspects of the broader issues covered in the lectures.
2) Document presentation: each student will make a brief (5-10 minute) presentation to the class on one of the documents they are using for their Document Exercise (for details of this and other assessments see pages at the end of this outline.)
3) All students will receive individual guidance from me regarding their Document Exercise and Major Essay

Please Note: In addition to fulfilling the above assessment requirements, students are expected to attend at least 80% of their lectures and tutorials in order to pass the course. A student unable to attend a tutorial should, as a courtesy to me and fellow class-memobers, notify me or the School Office, beforehand if possible or as promptly after the absence as possible.
Grades

All results are reviewed at the end of each semester and may be adjusted to ensure equitable marking across the School.

The proportion of marks lying in each grading range is determined not by any formula or quota system, but by the way that students respond to assessment tasks and how well they meet the objectives of the course. Nevertheless, since higher grades imply performance that is well above average, the number of distinctions and high distinctions awarded in a typical course is relatively small. At the other extreme, on average 6.1% of students do not meet minimum standards and a little more (8.6%) in first year courses. For more information on the grading categories see https://my.unsw.edu.au/student/academiclife/assessment/GuideToUNSWGrades.html

Submission of Assessment Tasks

Students must submit two copies of each assessment task, one hard copy and one electronic copy.

All hard copy assignments are to be submitted to the School Assignment Box, outside the front counter of the School of Humanities and Languages, level 2, Morven Brown building. They must have a properly completed School Assessment Coversheet, with the declaration signed and dated by hand. The Coversheet can be downloaded from https://hal.arts.unsw.edu.au/students/courses/course-outlines/. It is your responsibility to make a backup copy of the assignment prior to submission and retain it.

Assignments must be submitted before 4:00pm on the due date. Assignments received after this time will be marked as having been received late.

In addition, an electronic copy must be submitted through Moodle on Turnitin by 5pm on the due date.

Late Submission of Assignments

Late assignments will attract a penalty. Of the total mark, 3% will be deducted each day for the first week, with Saturday and Sunday counting as two days, and 10% each week thereafter.

The penalty may not apply where students are able to provide documentary evidence of illness or serious misadventure. Time pressure resulting from undertaking assignments for other courses does not constitute an acceptable excuse for lateness.

6. Attendance/Class Clash

Attendance

Students are expected to be regular and punctual in attendance at all classes in the courses in which they are enrolled. Explanations of absences from classes or requests for permission to be absent from classes should be discussed with the teacher and where applicable accompanied by a medical certificate. If students attend less than 80% of their possible classes they may be refused final assessment.
Students who falsify their attendance or falsify attendance on behalf of another student will be dealt with under the student misconduct policy.

Class Clash

A student who is approved a permissible clash must fulfil the following requirements:

a. The student must provide the Course Convenor with copies of lecture notes from those lectures missed on a regular basis as agreed by the Course Convenor and the student.

b. If a student does attend a lecture for which they had secured a permitted clash they will still submit lecture notes as evidence of attendance.

c. Failure to meet these requirements is regarded as unsatisfactory performance in the course and a failure to meet the Faculty’s course attendance requirement. Accordingly, Course Convenors will fail students who do not meet this performance/attendance requirement.

d. Students must attend the clashed lecture on a specific date if that lecture contains an assessment task for the course such as a quiz or test. Inability to meet this requirement would be grounds for a Course Convenor refusing the application. If the student misses the said lecture there is no obligation on the Course Convenor to schedule a make-up quiz or test and the student can receive zero for the assessment task. It should be noted that in many courses a failure to complete an assessment task can be grounds for course failure.

7. Academic Honesty and Plagiarism

Plagiarism is presenting someone else’s thoughts or work as your own. It can take many forms, from not having appropriate academic referencing to deliberate cheating.

In many cases plagiarism is the result of inexperience about academic conventions. The University has resources and information to assist you to avoid plagiarism.

The Learning Centre assists students with understanding academic integrity and how to not plagiarise. Information is available on their website: http://www.lc.unsw.edu.au/plagiarism/. They also hold workshops and can help students one-on-one.

If plagiarism is found in your work when you are in first year, your lecturer will offer you assistance to improve your academic skills. They may ask you to look at some online resources, attend the Learning Centre, or sometimes resubmit your work with the problem fixed. However, more serious instances in first year, such as stealing another student’s work or paying someone to do your work, may be investigated under the Student Misconduct Procedures.

Repeated plagiarism (even in first year), plagiarism after first year, or serious instances, may also be investigated under the Student Misconduct Procedures. The penalties under the procedures can include a reduction in marks, failing a course or for the most serious matters (like plagiarism in an Honours thesis) or even suspension from the university. The Student Misconduct Procedures are available here: http://www.gs.unsw.edu.au/policy/documents/studentmisconductprocedures.pdf

10. Course Evaluation and Development

Courses are periodically reviewed and students’ feedback is used to improve them. Feedback is gathered using various means including UNSW’s Course and Teaching Evaluation and Improvement (CATEI) process.

11. Student Support

The Learning Centre is available for individual consultation and workshops on academic skills. Find out more by visiting the Centre’s website at: http://www.lc.unsw.edu.au

12. Grievances

All students should be treated fairly in the course of their studies at UNSW. Students who feel they have not been dealt with fairly should, in the first instance, attempt to resolve any issues with their tutor or the course convenors.
If such an approach fails to resolve the matter, the School of Humanities and Languages has an academic member of staff who acts as a Grievance Officer for the School. This staff member is identified on the notice board in the School of Humanities and languages. Further information about UNSW grievance procedures is available at: https://my.unsw.edu.au/student/atoz/Complaints.html

13. Other Information

myUNSW is the online access point for UNSW services and information, integrating online services for applicants, commencing and current students and UNSW staff. To visit myUNSW please visit either of the below links:
https://my.unsw.edu.au
https://my.unsw.edu.au/student/atoz/ABC.html

OHS
UNSW’s Occupational Health and Safety Policy requires each person to work safely and responsibly, in order to avoid personal injury and to protect the safety of others. For all matters relating to Occupational Health, Safety and environment, see http://www.ohs.unsw.edu.au/

Special Consideration

In cases where illness or other circumstances produce repeated or sustained absence, students should apply for Special Consideration as soon as possible.

The application must be made via Online Services in myUNSW. Log into myUNSW and go to My Student Profile tab > My Student Services channel > Online Services > Special Consideration.

Applications on the grounds of illness must be filled in by a medical practitioner. Further information is available at:
https://my.unsw.edu.au/student/atoz/SpecialConsideration.html

Student Equity and Disabilities Unit

Students who have a disability that requires some adjustment in their learning and teaching environment are encouraged to discuss their study needs with the course convener prior to or at the commencement of the course, or with the Student Equity Officers (Disability) in the Student Equity and Disabilities Unit (9385 4734). Information for students with disabilities is available at: http://www.studentequity.unsw.edu.au

Issues that can be discussed may include access to materials, signers or note-takers, the provision of services and additional examination and assessment arrangements. Early notification is essential to enable any necessary adjustments to be made.
Tutorial Program

Week 2  Introductory tutorial: thinking about poverty and welfare

Week 8 Excursion: Quarantine Station

In Week 8 we will be going to the Quarantine Station at Manly. This is an extremely interesting site which operated as a detention centre between 1828 and 1984 for all new arrivals and/or returning citizens who came to Sydney by ship and were suspected of carrying an infectious disease. The groups it dealt with changed over time and its treatment of people within the station depended on their status outside. Our visit will provide a close-up perspective on ‘Contagion and the social order.’ Details of when and how we will get there will be given in class.

ASSESSMENTS

The assessments are integrated and enable you to focus and develop your own research interests. The major assessment is a Research Essay where you devise your own question on one aspect of the course. The Document Exercise enables you to do some preliminary research on this topic. The Document Presentation enables you to present your ideas to the class and thus benefit from ‘peer assessment’. NOTE WELL: while the documents can relate to the essay you cannot, of course, submit the same content for the Document Exercise and the Research Essay. You need to start thinking from Week One about your major essay and the Document Exercise that will help you get into it. I have explained below how each of these will work.

These assessments will allow you to develop the learning outcomes listed above, in particular: to focus on specific issues where poverty, welfare and social justice have shaped Australian history, to frame interpretations within shifts in historiography, and to develop the skills necessary for research: critical thinking, selection of relevant evidence, construction of an argument from evidence and clear writing.

DOCUMENT EXERCISE

Due: Week 5, 4 April, 4.00pm
Word length: 1000 words
Contribution to assessment: 20%

Question: Choose 2 contrasting primary sources and write a paper on how they shed light on one of the major themes of the course. What do these sources tell us about the society of which they were a part? How useful is each one, in what ways, and why?

This exercise is preparation for the major essay. It should be in the same research area as the essay but the essay will use a wider and deeper range of primary material and be more fully engaged with the secondary literature. This exercise is due early in the session ie Week 5 so that you will get feedback early in the course which will assist you in writing the essay, due in Week 10. You should be thinking about what you will do in this exercise from week 1.

The essential aim of this assignment is for you to analyse 2 different sources that provide contrasting insights into the same topic. You must discuss what they reveal about the past and what methodological issues are involved in interpreting them. You should refer briefly to secondary sources - particularly to indicate what your sources contribute to the historiography, and to flesh out context if needed. It is also helpful to check the Australian Dictionary of Biography, an online scholarly resource, in case there is a brief biography of the author of your source. This can be very helpful in providing insight into its immediate and broader context. However, the bulk of the assignment should be based on the 2 primary sources of your choice. So take care to choose ones that will give you something interesting and important to say, perhaps providing contrasting perspectives on the same issue or event.

You can choose any 2 primary sources that relate to any of the themes in the course. Historians usually work from written documents, but you can also include art works and buildings though at least two of your sources should be written documents. You do not have to choose a whole document, but the extract needs to be long enough for you to draw some conclusions of significance.

The 2 different sources should relate to the same topic so that you can compare and contrast what they tell you. When you are thinking about your sources you should consider the following questions - your responses to them will provide you with the basis of your discussion of methodological issues:

- what is it? who produced it? when? why?
- what is the point of view of the author/creator?
- who is its intended audience?
- what does it seek to reveal? what it does not seek to reveal?
- does it convey unintended messages?

Note that your assignment should be written in continuous prose and should be a specific response to the questions posed in the box above. It should not be a series of dot points in response to these questions. All papers should be properly footnoted and provide a bibliography. Please consult The Little Red Booklet. This is freely available to all students via the UNSW history web-page.

When submitting your assignment, please include a copy of the documents in addition to your 1000 word paper. If one is an art work or a building, please include an image of it.

DOCUMENTS

The library contains many collections of relevant documents from which you can choose.
Collections of documents:
CMH Clark (eds) Select documents in Australian history, 1788-1850 Angus & Robertson, 1950.
F K Crowley (ed) A documentary history of Australia: colonial Australia, Nelson, 1973
K Daniels Uphill all the way: a documentary history of women in Australia, U of Q Press, 1980.
R Ward & Robertson J Such was life: select documents in Australian social history, Sydney, 1969.
Elizabeth Webby Colonial voices: letters, diaries, journalism and other accounts of nineteenth century Australia, University of Qld Press, 1989.

Memoirs, letters, documents
In addition to the collections listed above there are thousands of volumes of primary sources in the form of individuals’ memoirs, letters, journals, advice books in the UNSW Library, as well as Fisher Library at the University of Sydney and the Mitchell Library in the city. You can access these either through the names of individuals or via a subject search.

Websites
Many major Australian libraries have started to digitize their collections, including primary materials, and they continue to do so. So you will find letters, diaries, government reports and newspapers online. A good way into this is via TROVE (formerly Libraries Australia), the database of the National Library of Australia. You can access this via the UNSW Library Catalogue.

CLASS PRESENTATION
Contribution to assessment 10%
5-10 minutes
Each student will be allocated a timeslot in one of the tutorials to present their analysis of at least ONE of the primary documents they will be using in their exercise. You need to explain what it is, what its perspective or point of view is, what questions it raises and how it relates to the topic you have chosen. Please email your document(s) to me at least 24 hours before the class so that I can put it on Moodle. This way the whole class can have read it and be prepared to engage with it. This part of the tutorial will form valuable practice for all students in the interpretation of primary documents.

RESEARCH ESSAY
Due – Week 10: Friday 16 May
Word length: 3000 words
Contribution to assessment: 50%
The research essay is the major assessment task of the course. It makes use of the skills you have acquired throughout the semester in the selection and interpretation of both secondary and primary sources, as well as what you have learnt of welfare history in the course. This task also allows you considerable independence and creativity, particularly in your choice of research question and how you approach it.

You will benefit by choosing the same topic area for the essay as the one you used in your document exercise. This will allow you to build on the preliminary work you have done and, because you will have almost the whole semester to concentrate on this topic, you will have the opportunity to develop a familiarity with it and to delve deeply into the aspects that interest you. The essay should not include a repetition of the exercise and you should not use the same primary documents again. However you may use different documents or make a brief reference to one used in the first assignment.

When you are thinking about how to focus a topic you might find inspiration in your own family, cultural group, local area or even class as a starting point. The research inquiries arising from the document exercise will help you and you will be given plenty of guidance and support to devise your own essay question.

In addition to the advice offered here, see also the general advice about how to approach an essay in The Little Red Booklet. Before you can start reading for this essay you will need to compile a list of relevant sources. There are a number of ways of doing this, and you should try a combination of the following:

[1] Refer to the Australian History Subject Guide via the UNSW Library's home-page. It provides access to databases, key resources, reference books and journals.
[2] The most important database for this subject is APAIS (also known as APAFT), which you can access through the Australian History Subject Guide or directly via the library catalogue. It is an index to articles published in Australian history and you can search via subject and author.
[3] Try the subject search on the library's computers. You will need to think laterally about the keywords you use - try various combinations. This will only produce book references. For articles see [2] above.
[4] Once you locate relevant books and articles, check their footnotes and bibliography for other possible sources.
[5] Go through the journals listed in the library guide. Recent issues of journals such as Australian Historical Studies also carry extensive book reviews which may give you additional leads.
[6] General Histories, can provide a starting point for essays, providing general context for your specific topic and also giving the major sources.
[7] Once you locate one relevant book, you can simply browse through the library shelves near where this book is located which will contain similar works that could be useful.

Essay tips
- Make sure you have a focused question that is answerable in the word length.
- Address the question.
- Set out your argument at the start of the essay in the introduction. Have a sustained and clear argument throughout the essay.
- Use primary evidence to support your argument.
- Avoid repetition. Use the final sentence of a paragraph to indicate how the evidence you have just presented adds to your argument.
- Contextualise your argument – use dates. History essays are supposed to examine an issue in a particular context to show how something has changed over time. You must clearly demonstrate what the context of your topic is.
- Be specific wherever possible – use people’s names and dates when events occurred.
- Students are rewarded for the originality of their argument and the sophistication of their analysis of historical documents. This demonstrates their research and analytical skills. The best essays also take into account the arguments of other historians and their interpretation of similar material or events. Do you agree with them? Why? Why not?
- Always have a succinct conclusion that relates back to your introduction and summarises the case you have been setting out through the body of the essay.
A note on websites and web-based research
Please note that websites are often not acceptable substitutes for print-based research. If you wish to include web-based research, please use only those sites which are likely to contain reliable material, that is, sites created by universities, libraries, archives and some government bodies, and electronic academic journals. Reference websites properly, citing author, title, date and place of origin. Do not simply list the website address, this will NOT be accepted.

Notes on assessment of essays

- You are expected to consult at least EIGHT references and list them in your bibliography.
- This number is the minimum and EXCLUDES websites unless they are digitized versions of scholarly material eg articles, books or primary sources.
- You may include readings from the Study Kit but make sure your reference is to the original source, not to the Study Kit.
- All papers should be properly footnoted and provide a synopsis and a bibliography. Please consult the Little Red Booklet for required footnote and bibliography presentation.

IN-CLASS REFLECTION
Contribution to assessment 20%
Week 13
The end of session test takes the form of an open book essay, completed in one hour in week 13. You will be given the question early in the session so that you can consider it as you engage with the course. In order to address the question you will need to have heard the lectures and done the readings so that you have an overview of the whole course, not just the topics you have researched in depth for your written assessment. It is particularly important in the study of history to encourage students to understand the sequence of significance. The reflection encourages you to consolidate and reflect upon what you have learnt.
